A fragment of a parchment document, likely from a historical manuscript. The parchment is heavily aged, discolored, and features numerous large, irregular holes and tears, suggesting significant damage or insect activity. The Arabic script is written in a cursive style, with some characters clearly legible, including 'ش' (shayn) and 'ل' (lam). The text is arranged in several lines, though the fragment is too small to provide a complete context. The edges of the parchment are frayed and uneven.

This image shows a fragment of ancient papyrus, likely from a classical manuscript. The papyrus is heavily aged, discolored, and damaged, with numerous holes and tears. Faint, illegible traces of writing in a cursive script, possibly Greek or Latin, are visible on the surface. The fragment is set against a dark background.

الحمد لله الذي
أشرك الله الرحمن الرحيم
الذي لا اله الا هو
الذي لا اله الا هو

واذا قالوا
فما ممانر
الله قال الله
روا لا اله الا
انصطحع
يحيى الله
الرافع

بسم الله الرحمن الرحيم
الحمد لله الذي
جعلنا من خلقه

و من اهل بيته

بسم
